

Calming Your Nerves to Study

Practice Description: This practice helps manage your nerves while studying. Many of us find preparing for tests and writing papers stressful and avoid studying altogether. These normal feelings and behaviors can be discouraging but by noticing and identifying our stressful thoughts and feelings, we can find a balance of focused energy and kind thoughts to support ourselves.

Age Group: 6-12 Grade

Welcome to the Calming Your Nerves to Study practice.
This practice can help to find a balance of focused energy and kind thoughts during stressful times of preparing for tests or writing papers.
Let's start by getting into a comfortable position with both feet on the floor, and a long, strong back so that your body supports your intention to be awake and aware. Allow your hands to rest in your lap. Try softening your eyes and turning your gaze down toward your knees or to the images on the screen. If you feel comfortable, you may choose to close your eyes.
Think about how you feel when you know that you should be studying for a test or writing a paper.
Pause for 3 seconds
What are some of your feelings? Do you feel nervous, anxious, or unfocused?
Pause for 10 seconds
These are types of emotional energy that everyone might experience.
Do you have thoughts like, "This is too much!", "It's not worth it." There is no need to believe these thoughts as they may be coming from a place of stress.
Do you feel any physical sensations in your shoulders, head, eyes, or stomach? Does your heart beat faster?
Pause 10 seconds
To calm down these feelings, gently bring your kind attention to the area in your body with the strongest sensations as you breathe into that area. And as you breathe out, allow the edges of that area to soften. Take several breaths like this.
Pause 10 seconds
If you'd like, place a hand over your heart or on your belly as a reminder that you are bringing a kind and gentle awareness to that area.
Pause 10 seconds
Breathing into a feeling can help to soften and relieve any tightness or stress.
Take a few more nourishing breaths and think to yourself, "I can do this", "I've got this, "I have time to prepare", or even remind yourself that, "It will be okay".
Pause 10 seconds

Try to be kind to yourself and recognize that supporting yourself helps to calm your nerves and access your highest and best thinking.

Now, visualize yourself sitting with what you need to study, calmly reviewing it all with curiosity.

Pause for 5 seconds

Imagine yourself completing your work. Perhaps congratulate yourself for putting in this good effort by thinking, "I did it." "Good job!" or "Nice work!"

Take a few more nourishing breaths and you may open your eyes and bring your attention back to the room around you.
